I was born and raised in Cache Valley. I was a LPN for 37 years working part-time while I raised my five children in Mendon Utah. I picked up the watercolors and primary self- taught myself for 5 years before taking wonderful workshops by renowned artist in Utah. I am a member of the watercolor Society and a signature member within the organization. I have been in juried shows through the years, and went to the Western Fed. Show two years.

Watercolor landscapes and abstracts

An artist residing in northern Utah, in a 1902 historical home that I share with my wife who is also an artist.... A talented maker of rugs and other textile art. Our studios are in adjacent areas to each other at home, which makes for an enjoyable experience of life together as we create and explore. As for me, I photograph and paint or just paint the landscapes that I'm most familiar with ... those that are in my near area. I'm primarily a watercolorist but have worked with other mediums as well. But in the end, watercolor is where I'm pulled, as well as the landscapes which motivate and inspire me to paint.

Rene Orland Lopez-Ortiz

Rene Orland Lopez-Ortiz is currently a senior at Mountain Crest High School. He is a quiet artistic force to be reckoned with. He enjoys painting with acrylics, watercolors, ink drawing, and even throwing pottery on the wheel. His favorite theme to address in his artwork is anything that makes him feel calm. Many times this includes architecture or landscapes. He wants his architecture art to radiate warmth from within, and his landscape paintings to feel like a cool summer breeze. When asked to describe himself, Rene prides himself on being calm, creative, kind and having a huge imagination.

Shanna Thompson

Graphic Design

Shanna Thompson is a native of Cache Valley and received her BFA from Utah State University. She has worked as an art director as well as a graphic designer. As a child, Shanna has always liked the arts. Her mother instilled a love of beauty from a very young age and Shanna displays this in her art. Shanna's art also celebrates the beauty and greatness of God.

I really did grow up on a potato farm in beautiful Midwest America. My mother a Mexican migrant worker from the south and my pops a first generation German farmer "making his way." Their "love story" is a great one... if interested ask me about it. It is definitely filled with "triumph & tragedy!"

I was lucky to have found my "true love" early on, ART then Photography which really to me means and equals one!

Like many other photographers I am inspired and curious by people and the ways in which they live. The importance of the "humanity" of people and their place in my work is an un-ending journey and search. Forever curious, forever young and forever taking a chance to see life and its random circumstance.

I studied art at the Milwaukee Institute of Art & Design and earned my MFA at the University of Wisconsin Madison.

My mentors are many and I am lucky for that... Over the last twenty years I have worked on many fine art, commercial and journalistic projects using various camera formats and lighting conditions. I sure hope to keep them coming...

I am fortunate to have over a decade of teaching experience at various schools like the Milwaukee Institute of Art & Design, & as a Graduate student I served as a TA at the University WI – Madison in the Art Department, I also served as an Adjunct Photo Prof at Carthage College (Which was one of my favorite teaching gigs.), & my longest run (11 Years) was a Photo Faculty member in the Media & Creative Arts Department at the Milwaukee Area Technical College.

But... then of course a new "life circumstance" the West came calling.... So as it stands I travel from the West to the Midwest to the West still making pictures! Still searching, still teaching, still in love & still "dancing with strangers."

Nikki Root

Glass

Root lives in Providence, but she fell in love with stained glass when she and her husband lived in Georgia, where stained glass is common in antebellum mansions. Root had stained glass in her own home there, and she said, “Once you have stained glass in your home, you never want to live without it.”

In 1994, Root and her family moved to Cache Valley, and she enrolled in a stained glass class, where she learned the basics of cutting and soldering. She was able to create eight windows for her new home for which the Northern Utah Home Builders Association presented her with the 1995 Outstanding Glasswork Award. Since then, she has designed and created countless stained glass windows and, for several years she has instructed the very stained glass class she once attended.

After raising her five children, Root was inspired to develop her own techniques to create unique 3-D glass art panels incorporating vintage and antique glass dishes as well as other glass items. This launched her career as an upcycled glass artist, a genre she pioneered. She collects glass from all over the country, searching for pieces with unique style, color, texture, and history. Each item is then individually hand-cut and crafted to showcase the rich reliefs, dimensions, and beauty of the original pieces.

Root debuted her upcycled glass art at Summerfest Arts Faire in 2011. Since then she has displayed her work at art shows and galleries throughout Utah, Idaho, Nevada, Arizona, Wyoming, and California, receiving awards and recognition for her art.

“We are pleased to present a piece of Nikki’s work on our Summerfest poster for 2017,” said Thatcher, “especially since she really introduced and grew her art at Summerfest.”

Summerfest 2017 will be June 15-17 at the Logan LDS Tabernacle grounds. The festival occurs each year on Father’s Day weekend, bringing together 150 visual artists and about 30 performers on Tabernacle Square in its free-to-the-public event. In addition, about 23 food vendors from around the region provide a variety of cuisines for hungry visitors.

Interested artists and vendors can contact Thatcher at (435) 213-3858 or Elaine@logansummerfest.com.
